Chapter 112: The Temporal Advantage of the Inner Worlds

The inner worlds created by the third and fourth clones of Sung Jin-Woo and Sung Su-Ho were not ordinary realms. They were constructed with a temporal flow that far exceeded the natural limits of the multiverse. Within these worlds, time moved at an astonishing pace: one second outside the inner worlds equated to an entire year inside, making one day outside equivalent to 86,400 years within.

This temporal manipulation granted the emissaries and their armies an unparalleled advantage, allowing them to evolve, grow, and prepare at a rate unmatched by any external force. The clones, with their mastery over divine powers, had designed these worlds to ensure that their emissaries and creations could flourish, adapt, and refine their strategies and abilities far beyond what was possible in ordinary time.

Impact of Accelerated Time

1. Rapid Evolution and Growth
The armies within these inner worlds experienced centuries of training, battle, and refinement in what amounted to mere minutes for those outside. Each second brought new advancements in their techniques, weaponry, and strategies, creating forces that were perpetually improving.

2. Technological and Mystical Advancements
The emissaries utilized the accelerated time to develop new forms of technology, magic, and divine tools that further enhanced the power of their armies. Ancient techniques lost to time in the outside world were rediscovered and perfected within these realms.

3. Strategic Refinement
The emissaries and their generals had eons to plan, simulate, and refine strategies against potential threats. By the time any threat from the multiverse reached their armies, the strategies to counter them had already been rehearsed for millennia.

4. Cultural and Societal Flourishing
Entire civilizations within these inner worlds rose and thrived under the guidance of the emissaries. Cultural, philosophical, and spiritual advancements flourished, creating deeply loyal and motivated warriors who viewed their service as both a duty and an honor.

5. Unprecedented Power Accumulation
The temporal flow allowed the inner worlds to harness immense amounts of energy, mana, and divine essence. This accumulation of resources further empowered the emissaries, granting them the ability to create even greater beings and structures within their realms.

The Significance of Temporal Flow

For the third and fourth clones, this temporal manipulation was not just a strategic advantage but a declaration of their unparalleled mastery over creation. By accelerating the growth and evolution of their armies within these worlds, they ensured that their forces would remain unmatched, ready to face any threat to the Divine Triad's dominion.

As days passed in the multiverse, millennia of preparation unfolded within the inner worlds. The armies of Nyxion, Aurelith, Umbrosar, and Virelith became forces of unimaginable power, each one capable of challenging and overcoming entire universes.

The accelerated flow of time was both a gift and a responsibility, driving the emissaries to continually strive for perfection in their domains. The inner worlds, each a testament to the creative power of their creators, stood as eternal bastions of strength and innovation for the Divine Triad’s cause.

Thus, the infinite potential of these inner worlds continued to grow, shaping the future of the multiverse itself.
